

Reclaim Today - Content Agreement

We're so glad you're interested in partnering with Reclaim Today! We hope this information helps bring clarity to some of the questions you might have.

Publishing Guidelines

We accept content that has been published or submitted elsewhere, but please note that all content will go through Reclaim Today's review process before it's posted. It is likely that the final product will vary significantly from its original form.

Once content, written or visual, has gone through our internal review process, we will request your approval to publish the final version of the content. With this approval, you agree to give Reclaim Today exclusive rights to the final, edited version of the content and/or images, to be used or republished at any future date. Note that all copy and publishing rights of the original version of the content, in the form it was first submitted, belong with the writer. Reclaim Today only holds rights to the final version, which has been shaped and influenced by the Reclaim Today team.

By approving the final version of your content to be published, you also agree that the timing, manner, categorization, tagging, titling, description, and general representation of your content, including associated images, is at our full discretion.

Individuals are free to republish the content on their own platform, with the request that Reclaim Today is credited with a line that says, "This article/project was originally published on www.reclaimtoday.org (or at original URL). Republished with permission." Reclaim Today is also open to republish requests from other organizations or news agencies. Those inquiries should be directed to contact@reclaimtoday.org, and are reviewed on a case-by-case basis.

Photos and biographies: By providing Reclaim Today with a photo and bio information, you're consenting to this information being displayed and shared publicly, as well as used internally in presentations and publications.

Compensation

Reclaim Today exists because of our amazing pool of volunteer contributors, and we do not offer monetary compensation for articles. We are so grateful for the time and talent that they give to us!

After reading this and submitting your content, you are acknowledging and consenting to the above information.